Dear Hiring Manager,

I bring 25 years of insurance and finance expertise directly aligned with your transformation mandate. My value sits at the intersection you're building: process discipline, operating model redesign, and delivery rigor in heavily regulated environments.

Over the past decade, I've led similar programs—not in theory, but in execution. At a mid-cap insurer, I redesigned the end-to-end claims operating model, cutting cycle time 34% while reducing manual handoffs by 42%. The work spanned process mapping, organizational restructuring, and tool implementation. More recently, I built the PMO framework for a group-wide regulatory reporting transformation, coordinating across Finance, Actuariat, and IT to deliver three major regulatory resets on schedule.

What I bring to zeb: I understand the technical language of insurance—composite, life, health; the revenue cycle from distribution through claims. I can translate between CFO office rigor and operational reality. I'm trained in process architecture and comfortable with both traditional process modeling and modern automation thinking. My track record is in finishing projects where complexity or stakeholder friction typically causes delays.

The honest gap: I've worked as a senior independent consultant and in interim leadership roles rather than in traditional consulting firms. But this is precisely why I can add immediate value—I'm used to stepping into ambiguous situations, working across siloed teams, and driving clarity without formal authority.

I'm genuinely interested in joining zeb's approach to insurance transformation. I'd welcome a conversation about how my experience translates to your client work and team.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
