Dear Hiring Manager,

BNP Paribas Real Estate's REset programme—consolidating 10 ERP instances into a single European platform while redesigning cash management and control workflows—is exactly the kind of transformation where I add the most value.

I've spent 25 years delivering in finance and insurance. The last decade has been PMO and programme delivery: I've led multi-year technology and process transformations where the real friction sits at the intersection of Finance, IT, and regulatory compliance. I know how to hold both sides of that conversation—technical enough to challenge implementation choices, financially literate enough to protect what matters to the business.

Two concrete examples. At AXA, I managed the programme office for a multi-country finance operating model redesign—process mapping, systems selection, cutover. We brought in ERP, rationalised legacy applications, and delivered a phased rollout across seven countries. Second: I served as interim Finance Manager for a major insurer's regulatory reporting transformation, embedded in the CFO office, driving alignment between Finance operations, Risk, Compliance, and IT through three major releases. In both cases, I owned the bridge between business commitments and delivery reality.

One honest gap: I've worked primarily as a consultant and interim manager, not in a permanent IT leadership role. What I bring instead is deep functional domain knowledge—I understand Finance as a stakeholder function, not as an external client. That perspective matters when you're designing systems that Finance will use every day.

I'm ready to transition into a CDI leadership role where the scope justifies that commitment. This programme does.

I'd welcome a conversation about how my experience maps to your programme roadmap.

Best regards,
Xavier Robitaille
