Dear RSM Hiring Team,

I'm applying for the Senior Consultant role in your Finance Transformation – Insurance team because my 25-year track record in insurance finance and regulatory reporting aligns directly with what you need: someone who moves clients through complex transformations without getting stuck in either the technical weeds or the political noise.

I've spent the last decade redesigning finance operating models for insurers facing the same pressures your clients face—tightening regulatory requirements, legacy system constraints, pressure to close faster and report cleaner. Most recently, I led a full closing process redesign for a €2B+ insurance group: mapped 180+ procedures, rebuilt controls frameworks, migrated teams off manual spreadsheets onto SAP. The result was 5 days faster month-end close and 40% reduction in control exceptions. I've done similar work on statutory reporting, IFRS 9 implementation, and finance-IT bridge work where the real bottleneck is alignment, not technical skill.

I also know I'm not looking for a CDI in the traditional sense right now—I run a consulting entity and value the flexibility that brings—but the right mission at a firm like RSM (where people actually recommend you) changes the equation. What matters to me is working on meaningful transformations with senior partners who care about delivery rigor.

I'd welcome a conversation about your current client portfolio in insurance and where you see the biggest execution gaps. I'm confident I can add value quickly, and I'm not a person who needs much scaffolding to be useful.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
