Dear Janus Henderson Team,

Fund accounting expertise paired with the discipline to execute complex product changes—that's what you need for this role, and that's my track record.

I've spent 25 years in finance and insurance operations, the last decade managing high-stakes regulatory and operational transformations. My recent work centers on exactly what matters here: NAV processes, fund restructures, regulatory impact analysis, and the operational coordination that keeps investors protected when liquidity or structure shifts. I've built and overseen closing frameworks, redesigned control environments, and led cross-functional teams through large-scale product migrations—the same combination of technical depth and stakeholder alignment this role demands.

Most relevant: I led the product change pipeline for a €2B+ fund platform, coordinating launches, mergers, and complex transitions across multiple jurisdictions. That included swing pricing policy implementation, large redemption workflows, and the liaison work with compliance and product teams you've described. I built the governance structures that made those parallel workstreams predictable and fair to investors. I'm comfortable in the regulatory nuance—UCITS, SICAV structures, TPA coordination—and I move quickly from analysis to implementation.

The honest gap: I've worked as a senior consultant on fixed-term mandates rather than employed analyst roles. But that means I'm used to delivering value fast, working independently, and earning trust through execution, not tenure. A 12-month FTC suits the way I work.

I'm based in France but relocating to London is straightforward. Happy to discuss how my experience translates directly to your team's needs.

Best,

Xavier Robitaille
