Re : Program Director

Leading a multi-year transformation of core insurance platforms across Benelux, with minimal localisation and a mandate that spans both COO and CTO lines, is not a governance exercise. It's a delivery problem across multiple lines of business, multiple vendors, and a lot of competing priorities that need one clear owner.

That's the kind of program I've run. At CNP, I rebuilt investment accounting production under Solvency II constraints across 350 billion euros in assets under management, delivered in 18 months, on schedule, coordinating actuarial, IT, and finance teams who had never worked from the same data model before. On a separate mandate, I led a core system implementation from design through go-live, managing multiple vendors against a fixed timeline while the business kept changing requirements mid-stream, and still landed the cutover without a delay. Both cases needed the same thing this role needs: someone who can hold senior stakeholders to a plan while the plan itself keeps moving, and who treats governance and benefits realisation as delivery tools, not paperwork.

I haven't run a program at group level with a CIO reporting line specifically, though I've worked at that altitude with CFOs and COOs directly.

Hybrid delivery is standard practice for me. At Clearwater, I ran remote-first workstreams with distributed teams across time zones without losing pace on deadlines.

Happy to talk through how this maps to the Benelux scope.
