Dear FTI Consulting Hiring Team,

I'm applying for the Senior Director, Business Transformation | Corporate Finance role because my 25-year track record in insurance and finance transformation directly addresses what you're building.

I've spent my entire career at the intersection of technical rigor, regulatory constraint, and organizational complexity—exactly where business transformation creates or destroys value. As an independent consultant, I've led operating model redesigns, process-driven cost reduction, and regulatory reporting overhauls for major financial services firms. I don't consult in theory; I sit in CFO offices and delivery rooms where decisions stick or fail.

Two recent examples: I redesigned a €200M closing cycle for a tier-1 insurer, reducing month-end lag by 40% while embedding tighter controls across Finance, Actuariat, and Risk—a mission that required aligning four executive teams on non-negotiable constraints. Earlier, I led a PMO-driven transformation for a finance function merging two legacy systems under a hard regulatory deadline; we delivered on time, under budget, and the operating model held post-go-live.

Here's my honest gap: I'm currently independent and self-directed. FTI's model asks for someone embedded in a team from day one, building client relationships, and developing junior talent. I thrive in both modes, but a CDI structure may feel different from my recent practice. That said, the quality of work you do—real impact on complex situations—is exactly what drew me to stop freelancing in the first place.

I'm ready to talk through how my depth in transformation mechanics and financial discipline could add immediate value to your team.

Best,

Xavier Robitaille
