Dear Hiring Manager,

I'm writing to express my interest in the Deputy Finance Director role at 20Twenty Search's Lloyd's client. After 25 years in insurance and finance—the last decade focused on transformation programmes in regulatory reporting, operating model redesign, and CFO office delivery—I recognise this as the exact intersection where my experience creates immediate value.

What makes this role compelling to me is the explicit mandate to challenge existing practices and drive technological upgrade. I've spent the last 5 years doing precisely this: redesigning financial close processes for mid-market (re)insurers, rebuilding IFRS 17 reporting infrastructure, and embedding automation across GAAP/IFRS dual-reporting environments. On one assignment, I led the refactor of a Lloyd's platform's consolidated reporting stack—moving from manual spreadsheet-based GAAP/Solvency II dual tracking to a rules-driven system. Delivery: 40% faster close cycle, zero regulatory findings in the subsequent audit, and a scalable foundation for the team to absorb future regulation changes without re-engineering.

I'm genuinely interested in technology and its role in finance modernisation. I've worked alongside CTOs and engineering teams to evaluate and implement reporting tools; I understand where AI can meaningfully reduce manual effort (reconciliation, control testing) versus where it introduces execution risk.

My background is primarily interim and consulting—I've been based in France but work across EU and UK markets. The role is described as full-time, based in London. I'm open to that conversation; it depends on structure. What matters more to me is the calibre of the problem and the mandate to solve it properly.

I'd welcome a brief call to discuss how I can accelerate the department's transition phase and build the reporting infrastructure your client needs.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
