I'm a senior finance consultant with 25 years in insurance and banking—exactly the operating model and process transformation space this role requires. My background spans O2C, P2P, R2R redesigns, shared services setup, and regulatory reporting transformations, which maps directly to what you're building.

I've led similar end-to-end delivery cycles: process mapping, control framework design, vendor negotiation, and steering governance across multiple stakeholders. One example: I managed a P2P transformation for a major insurer covering 120+ suppliers across three markets—redesigned workflows, implemented SLAs, and secured client sign-off on a compressed timeline. Another: built the AMOA roadmap for a full finance operating model overhaul, balancing CFO priorities against IT constraints and regulatory requirements.

I work best in environments where discipline, clarity, and judgment matter more than process theater. Fully remote from Poland works well for me. I'm available immediately and have structured projects in Agile and Waterfall contexts, though my real skill is adapting methodology to what the client actually needs to move forward.

One honest note: I've worked freelance and as an interim executive for the past five years by choice. This role sounds like it could anchor into something more permanent if the fit is real—I'm open to that conversation if Antal sees it the same way.

Let's talk about what you're solving for and how I can add momentum to the delivery.
