Re : Senior Project Manager

Leading a large-scale technology transformation programme in Dublin while keeping senior stakeholders across business and IT aligned on scope, budget and benefits realisation is exactly the kind of delivery challenge that rewards someone who has run this before under real regulatory pressure.

At CNP, I rebuilt the investment accounting production chain under Solvency II constraints: 350 billion euros in assets under management, an 18-month programme, delivered on schedule with regulators watching the outcome. That meant managing RAID logs, budget tracking and a matrixed team spanning Finance, Actuarial, IT and Risk, the same governance discipline this role calls for on a larger technology footprint. On a separate systems integration mandate, I led the design and go-live of a SimCorp Dimension implementation from initial requirements through UAT and cutover, coordinating third-party vendors and internal teams on parallel workstreams without slipping the milestone plan. Both engagements required the same thing this programme needs: clear reporting to executive stakeholders, tight control of dependencies, and enough operational grip to catch problems before they surface in a steering committee.

My programme experience sits inside insurance and finance rather than sectors like retail or telecom, though the governance and delivery discipline carry across. Hybrid delivery has been standard practice throughout my recent work, including at Clearwater, so working across distributed teams from Dublin poses no adjustment.

Happy to walk through either engagement in more detail on a call.
