Re : Financial Services Consultant (Remote)

Scaling financial infrastructure for a gig-economy platform means processing high-volume, decentralized transaction flows while keeping compliance and reporting solid enough to survive regulatory scrutiny. That combination of speed, volume, and regulatory discipline is the core of this role.

At CNP Assurances, I rebuilt the investment accounting production line under Solvency II constraints, covering 350bn EUR in assets, delivered in 18 months, on time. That work required building controls and reconciliation processes that held up under audit while data kept moving daily across systems, which maps directly onto the transaction-flow optimization this role asks for.

On the compliance side, I've implemented IFRS 9 ECL methodology (expected credit loss, amortized cost categorization), the kind of framework that turns abstract regulatory text into working financial reporting. I've also led data migrations and cleared aging suspense accounts through structured UAT and defined accounting schemas, work that depends on the same financial data analysis and reporting tools this contract calls for.

I haven't worked inside gig-economy transaction structures specifically. My transaction-flow experience comes from insurance and asset management, not platform payouts, though the regulatory and reconciliation logic is similar.

Happy to walk through how that experience would transfer, if you want to set up a call.
