Dear SINC GmbH hiring team,

I'm writing about the Senior Consultant Insurance role in Wiesbaden. I bring 25 years in insurance and finance—every year in this sector—with the technical depth and delivery discipline you need for client transformation.

What sets me apart: I don't consult at the strategy level and hand off. I bridge the gap between what C-suite wants and what operations can actually execute. I've led PMO and process redesign across finance, claims, and underwriting functions. I speak both the business language of CFOs and actuaries and the technical language of system architects. Most importantly, I've mentored teams through complex implementations where stakeholder alignment breaks down projects.

Concrete example: I recently led a regulatory reporting overhaul for a mid-cap insurer—rebuilt data governance from scratch, reshaped the finance operating model, and delivered a 6-month close cycle reduction while ensuring compliance. That's the kind of work where insurance domain expertise plus project discipline wins. Another example: I've served as interim head of PMO for a transformation program spanning claims systems, with accountability for portfolio governance across 12+ parallel workstreams and €8M+ budgets.

One honest point: I've worked as an independent consultant and business owner for the past few years, not in a corporate structure. That gives me flexibility and operational ownership mindset—but if you need someone embedded full-time from day one in a traditional employment model, that's a conversation worth having upfront.

I'm interested in this role because SINC's focus on deep insurance expertise—not generic consulting—aligns with how I work. Happy to discuss how my background fits your specific client needs.

Best,

Xavier Robitaille
