I bring 25 years of insurance and finance experience, with a track record delivering complex transformation programmes where technical rigour, stakeholder alignment, and execution discipline make the difference. This Claims Transformation programme sits squarely in that space—cross-functional dependencies, external delivery partners, regulatory considerations, and a tight 2026 timeline demand someone who understands both the insurance operating model and how to drive delivery through that complexity.

My last three years have been spent as interim PMO lead and business analyst on a €40M+ finance transformation at a top-tier European insurer, where I rebuilt the programme governance, reset delivery timelines by 18 months, and brought seven workstreams into alignment. I've done the same work—operating model redesign, systems implementation, stakeholder orchestration—across claims, underwriting, and actuarial functions. I speak fluent Finance, IT, and Claims; I don't need translation between them.

I'm structured as an independent consultant (Expert Zone Advisory SAS, fully compliant). That model works well for fixed-term delivery roles like this one, though I'm open to discussing alternative arrangements if SiriusPoint has a preference.

What matters here is execution. SiriusPoint has a solid mandate and the capital to back it. You need someone who'll map dependencies, flag risks early, keep stakeholders honest about trade-offs, and move the needle on delivery without creating politics. That's the work I do best.

I'm in London regularly and available to discuss the role and programme scope at your convenience.
