Dear Hiring Manager,

I'm writing to express my interest in the Investment Officer position at AXA Wealth Europe. While my background is unconventional for this role—25 years in insurance and finance, predominantly on the transformation and finance operations side—I bring a specific strength that matters for your Middle Office Investments team: the ability to build and operationalize complex financial processes under pressure, with obsessive attention to detail and regulatory compliance.

Over the past decade, I've embedded myself in the mechanics of insurance product delivery: regulatory reporting frameworks, fund administration workflows, and the tension between investment mandates and operational execution. Most recently, I've worked as an interim finance leader and PMO consultant on large-scale operating model redesigns. This isn't investment management in the traditional sense. It's understanding how investment infrastructure actually works—how NAVs move, how mandates translate into operational reality, where things break, and how to fix them at scale.

For your team, this means I won't need hand-holding on insurance industry context. I'll move quickly into the operational rhythm: order placement, fund creation, account setup, fee management, and the daily calibration between investment intent and administrative execution. I'm comfortable with ambiguity and happy to learn the AXA-specific systems and investment philosophy alongside the role.

I should be direct: I'm a consultant by trade, not someone seeking permanent employment. This 6-month CDD is well-aligned with how I work. If the role extends or shifts toward something longer-term, we can revisit. What matters is that I deliver real operational value in the timeframe you have.

I'm based in the Paris region and available to start immediately. I'd welcome a conversation about your team's current priorities and where you're feeling operational friction.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
