I bring 25 years of insurance and finance expertise to roles where technical depth, regulatory clarity, and delivery discipline matter most. My work sits at the intersection of finance transformation, complex stakeholder alignment, and tight execution—exactly where most organizations struggle.

Over the past decade, I've led critical initiatives: redesigning a €500M closing process for a major insurer (cut cycle time 40%, reduced errors 65%), building out regulatory reporting frameworks for Solvency II compliance across three entities, and restructuring PMO governance for a €2B+ transformation programme. These aren't academic exercises—they're live operations under pressure, with board visibility and real regulatory stakes.

I work best as an interim or contract leader rather than in permanent roles. I move fast, build clarity quickly, and step back when the work is done. I'm comfortable operating solo or embedded in small teams. The tradeoff is straightforward: you get someone who's immediately useful on high-stakes problems, not someone building empire or learning on the job.

If the role involves finance transformation, programme delivery, business analysis, or regulatory/compliance complexity in insurance or banking, let's talk. I'm available to start immediately and happy to discuss scope, timeline, and how to structure the engagement.
