Re : Fund Accounting Manager

Onboarding a new client into Fund Accounting oversight while building the operating model that will run it long-term is a different problem than steady-state NAV production. It asks for someone who can hold both the transition plan and the control framework at once, in a Dublin operation that has grown fast and needs that growth to hold up under scrutiny.

I have spent 25 years in insurance and finance, largely on exactly this kind of handoff: taking a new mandate from design into daily operation without losing control quality along the way. At CNP, I rebuilt the investment accounting production chain under Solvency II constraints for 350 billion euros in assets under management, delivered in 18 months, on schedule, with the sub-ledger and control points designed before go-live rather than patched afterward. That work required the same sequencing this role does: get the onboarding right first, then convert it into a stable oversight model. I have also led UAT campaigns and data migration cutovers where NAV accuracy during transition was the main risk, and where escalation paths had to be clear from day one, not built after the first incident.

I have not worked directly on InvestOne, though I have implemented and run production on comparable platforms, SimCorp Dimension and Clearwater Analytics, including full remote delivery on the latter, so hybrid work and distributed team coordination are already part of how I operate.

Happy to walk through how this maps to Citi's onboarding plan on a call.
