

Dear PwC Hiring Team,

I'm writing to express my interest in the Operational Consultant role in Insurance within your Financial Reinforcement team.

For 25 years, I've worked exclusively in insurance and finance—the last decade delivering operational transformation programs where strategy meets execution. This is precisely where PwC positions itself: at the intersection of financial strategy and operational reality. I understand that terrain because I've lived it.

My value is straightforward: I reduce friction between what needs to happen and how it gets done. I've spent the bulk of my career in the CFO office, PMO functions, and process redesign—the exact spaces where your clients struggle most. On a recent engagement with a major insurance group, I led the redesign of their month-end closing process across three business units. The outcome: 40% reduction in cycle time, improved control maturity, and an operating model that scaled without proportional headcount. I've also managed regulatory reporting transformations under Solvency II constraints, where precision and cross-functional alignment aren't optional.

What matters to PwC clients isn't theoretical expertise—it's immediate, credible impact. I bring both technical depth (actuarial interfaces, accounting frameworks, risk reporting) and the discipline to translate that into workable solutions under real pressure.

One honest point: I've operated primarily as an independent consultant. The shift to working within a firm structure is deliberate. PwC's commitment to embedding expertise deep within client operations aligns with how I work best. I want to be useful where it counts most—supporting your teams and clients through the complex problems that matter.

I'd welcome a conversation about how I can contribute to your insurance practice.

Best regards,
Xavier Robitaille
