Re : Change Management Consultant

Driving adoption of Microsoft 365 Copilot and Agentic AI across a large organization means building a change program that survives C-suite scrutiny, competing priorities across multiple client engagements, and adoption metrics that hold up months after go-live.

My delivery record is built on that kind of pressure, in insurance and finance transformation. At CNP, I rebuilt investment accounting production under Solvency II constraints: 350 billion euros in assets, an 18-month program, delivered on schedule, with Finance, Actuarial, IT and Risk teams that didn't naturally agree on anything. Getting those groups to work together, more than the technology itself, decided whether the program landed. My PMO work on other finance and asset management transformations has meant taking over stalled, complex programs and rebuilding governance, timelines and reporting from scratch, often running several client engagements at once, the same concurrent workload this role asks for. I earned my PMP in 2025 and completed generative AI certifications at Vanderbilt and Yale in early 2026, because AI adoption is now part of the transformation work clients ask me for.

I haven't run a Prosci-certified OCM engagement or a Copilot rollout, and I don't hold Prosci certification. My change experience comes from regulatory and finance transformation, not formal OCM methodology.

Worth a call to see how that experience fits what you need here.
