Re : Head of Finance (Interim)

Building a finance function from scratch while covering legal and HR for a company scaling fast after a $30M Series A round is the kind of interim brief where structure has to keep pace with speed, not slow it down.

At CNP Assurances, I rebuilt investment accounting production under Solvency II constraints for a book of 350 billion euros, delivering the redesigned process in 18 months and on schedule, with the controls and reconciliations a board would expect to see in monthly reporting. On a separate engagement, I took a SimCorp Dimension implementation from design through to production, building the reporting and control frameworks the business needed to trust its own numbers, not just inherit someone else's. I've also led fast-close redesigns focused on cutting the gap between month-end and management accounts, which maps directly onto owning close and board-level reporting here.

My 25 years sit entirely in insurance and asset management, not SaaS or venture-backed tech. I haven't run payroll or benefits administration directly, though I've worked closely with HR on headcount planning and people costs.

Hybrid work is standard practice for me. My last engagement, at Clearwater Analytics, ran across distributed teams and time zones with no loss of rigor. As a contractor who is a non-UK Tax resident, based overseas, IR35 does not apply to me. Happy to talk through how this maps onto your first 90 days.
