Re : Strategic Project Lead (Remote)

Keeping technology programs pointed at the same business objectives while global stakeholders across Finance, IT, Actuarial and Risk stay on one plan, under budget and timeline constraints, is the exact tension this role is built around.

At CNP Assurances, I rebuilt the investment accounting production line under Solvency II constraints, across 350 billion euros of assets under management, delivering in 18 months without slipping the deadline. That program ran cross-functional: Actuarial fed the ECL inputs, IT rebuilt the interfaces, Finance owned the reporting output, and I managed the plan and the risk log that kept it on track. On a separate program, I led a SimCorp Dimension implementation from design through production cutover, coordinating stakeholders across multiple countries and time zones, with UAT and data migration owned end to end. Both programs used KPI tracking to catch slippage early and adjust the plan before it hit the deadline, the same discipline this role asks for.

I have not worked inside a pure technology or AI-driven product environment. My programs sit inside insurance and finance, focused on regulatory and accounting outcomes, not on product design.

Worth a call to see if the fit holds. My Calendly is open.
