Re : Interim Finance Transformation Lead

Modernizing a scaling professional services finance function while getting more out of an existing NetSuite investment is a hands-on job, not a program to manage from the sidelines. That's the distinction in this brief: fewer meetings about transformation, more time inside the system and the close.

That kind of work is where I spend most of my time. I've built ERP implementations end to end, from design through cutover to production, on platforms like SimCorp Dimension and Clearwater Analytics, including the workflow and reporting decisions that determine whether an ERP gets used properly or just gets tolerated. I've run data migrations and interface cutovers with full UAT cycles, cleared out suspense and clearing accounts that had piled up for years, and written the cahiers des charges that turned ad hoc fixes into repeatable procedures. On the close side, I've redesigned reconciliation and reporting steps to support fast-close, with the controls and documentation to make the new process stick after I leave, not just while I'm watching it.

I haven't worked hands-on inside NetSuite specifically. My ERP depth is on SimCorp Dimension and Clearwater Analytics, though the transformation logic (order-to-cash, procure-to-pay, record-to-report discipline) is the same regardless of the platform.

Happy to walk through specifics on a short call.
