Dear Hiring Manager,

I'm writing to express my interest in the Finance Transformation Manager role at Finatal. With 25 years in insurance and finance, I've spent the last decade leading exactly these programmes—modernising finance functions through systems, process redesign, and operational discipline in complex, multi-site environments.

What makes this relevant: I don't approach transformation as a consultant adding layers of recommendation. I've been embedded in CFO offices running large-scale ERP migrations, automation builds, and process optimisation where delivery and adoption matter more than theory. Most recently, I led a finance operating model redesign for an insurance group (£500m+ turnover, 8 sites), which included systems selection, process mapping, controls architecture, and stakeholder alignment across finance, actuariat, and IT. The work reduced close cycles by 35%, cut manual reporting by 40%, and created a credible roadmap for automation and AI integration.

I'm equally comfortable working across the technical and human sides of change—programme governance, milestone tracking, difficult trade-offs between perfection and pace, and ensuring leadership teams stay aligned when priorities shift. I understand the CFO's world: regulatory constraints, audit sensitivity, board visibility, and the need for finance to be a genuine business partner, not just a cost centre.

The hybrid setup works well for me. I'm UK-based (North London) and comfortable with London South as my working location.

One honest note: I've worked primarily as an interim and independent consultant. If you're building towards a permanent hire, that's fine—I'm open to the right full-time role. I'd rather be clear about that upfront than discover a misalignment later.

I'd welcome a brief call to discuss how my experience maps to your priorities and the shape of the role.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
