I bring 25 years of insurance and finance expertise directly into what ServiZurich needs: someone who can navigate investment accounting complexity while keeping regulatory and operational realities grounded. My career is built on translating between technical depth and business delivery—exactly what IAA requires when investment processes grow more intricate and systems multiply.

I've led comparable transformations. At a €15B insurance group, I redesigned their investment administration closing process, cutting month-end reporting timelines by 35% while tightening controls across three asset classes and four valuation frameworks. I worked across Finance, Actuariat, and Operations to do it—the same cross-functional dance you'll need here. More recently, I managed interim CFO office delivery on regulatory reporting for a mid-market insurer, where the win was knowing which technical calls mattered most under pressure.

What matters to me here: ServiZurich is part of a global machine, which means standards and governance are real constraints, not obstacles. I actually work well inside them. I'm not looking to overhaul everything—I'm looking to make sure investment accounting accuracy and transparency don't slip when complexity increases, and that the IAA team has the analytical clarity to support partners rather than just process transactions.

One honest note: I'm currently independent (Expert Zone Advisory). I've done interim and freelance work for eight years by choice, and I'm now open to the right full-time role where the problem is substantial enough and the environment collaborative enough to make it stick.

Let's talk about what you're seeing on the investment accounting side right now—what's working, what's stretched, and where a senior set of hands with domain weight would actually change the game.
