

Xavier Robitaille · xro@xavier-robitaille.com · +33 6 64 89 09 43

I bring 25 years of insurance finance expertise directly aligned with what you're building: consolidated financial steering, IFRS 17 analysis, and group reporting under complexity and regulatory pressure.

Over the past four years, I've run this exact playbook for two Fortune 500 insurers. At Generali, I led the consolidation close and IFRS 17 component mapping across eight countries—building the technical foundation that fed monthly steering cycles and board reporting. At Allianz, I owned forecast/budget cycles with 15+ business units, reconciled intercompany flows, and modeled trajectories under Solvency II constraints. Both roles required juggling actuarial input, technical accounting nuance, and management alignment at speed.

What I bring: I don't need ramp-up on insurance accounting mechanics or consolidation workflows. I read a profit & loss statement the way you do—I spot coherence breaks immediately. I build simulations that actually steer, not theatre. And I can translate IFRS 17 impacts into business language that makes arbitrage conversations land with CFOs and risk committees. I've shipped this on 10-month mandates before with clean handover.

The honest gap: I've been independent the last two years. I'm not a permanent employee right now, though the stability of a CDI appeals to me if the role and team are right. This one looks right—the scope is real, the timeline is clear, and the group context means the work matters.

I'm available to start immediately. My calendar is open if you want to walk through the last Allianz steering cycle or my approach to IFRS 17 staging.