Re : PMO senior (m/f/d)

A large-scale transformation programme at a financial market infrastructure organisation needs governance that holds across multiple workstreams: clear reporting lines, risks surfaced early, decisions tracked, and senior stakeholders aligned without constant escalation. That is the specific discipline this role calls for.

At Clearwater, as senior programme director, I ran several parallel implementations of a R to R SaaS solution, each with monthly sponsor committees at executive level and a consolidated view of deliverables, milestones, and resources on Monday.com, including the Luxembourg client Luxempart. That structure is what kept multiple workstreams moving in parallel without decisions getting lost between them.

At CNP, I automated the projected financial production across asset classes (P&L, cash flows) and the Solvency II investment reporting, covering 350bn euros in assets, with the SimCorp Dimension implementation taken from design to go-live in 18 months. A programme of that size depends on the same governance discipline this role asks for: steering committees that produce real decisions, risks tracked before they become blockers, and reporting that executives actually use.

At Coface, IFRS 9 was rolled out in stages over four years: successive proof-of-concepts, the ECL methodology, accounting schemes, user acceptance testing, and coordination with the depositary bank CACEIS. Alongside it, I built a Data Warehouse for investments, defining the fields, table structure, and input and output controls. Multi-year, multi-stakeholder delivery with a hard regulatory deadline is where I have spent most of my career, and it is exactly the kind of programme this role sits inside.

I operate as an independent consultant today. That said, a permanent role in Paris is entirely something I would consider, either directly or after an initial engagement period, given what this programme involves.

I would be happy to discuss how this governance experience applies to your current workstreams.

Best regards,
