I've spent 25 years in insurance and finance—entirely. That background matters here because IT spend governance only works when someone understands how finance and operations actually collide with technology decisions. That's where I operate.

In the past three years, I've managed IT economics and PMO delivery for two major insurers, leading portfolio reviews across 12+ operating entities, steering €80M+ in annual IT spend across change and run, and closing gaps between budget targets and actual delivery. One engagement: I redesigned the spend planning cycle for a large European insurer, reducing forecast variance from 18% to 4% and creating visibility that CFO leadership could actually act on. The framework stuck because it spoke both languages—finance's rigor and IT's reality.

What you're building at Allianz—active steering of OE IT spend aligned to group strategy—requires someone who doesn't translate between those worlds, but lives in both. I can engage stakeholders (OEs, H4, shared services) because I've sat in their seats. I can identify root causes and push for measures because I've done the detective work before. Portfolio and program reviews don't intimidate me; I've run dozens.

I should be direct about one thing: I'm currently independent. I've chosen this partly for flexibility, but I'm genuinely interested in returning to a strong senior role within a complex, large organization. Allianz's scale and the complexity of managing spend across multiple entities and geographies is exactly the kind of problem I want to solve.

I'm ready to move forward quickly. You can reach me at xro@xavier-robitaille.com or +33 6 64 89 09 43.
