I bring 25 years of insurance and finance experience—specifically the kind that matters when technical complexity, regulatory pressure, and delivery timelines collide. I've spent my entire career at this intersection: designing processes that actually work under constraint, building PMOs that unblock executives, and translating between Finance, Actuariat, IT, and Risk in ways that stick.

What I do best is reduce friction on high-stakes initiatives. On a recent transformation mandate, I redesigned a closing process for a mid-market insurer—cut cycle time by 35%, embedded controls that satisfied the auditors, and got five siloed teams aligned without drama. That's the pattern: I don't optimize for elegance; I optimize for what works and survives contact with reality.

I've led regulatory reporting redesigns, built CFO office functions from scratch, and run programs where the cost of failure was visible to the board. I'm equally comfortable in a hands-on AMOA role (writing specs, pushing back on scope) or a PMO chair (governance, rhythm, accountability). The common thread is judgment: knowing which fights matter, which corners are safe to cut, where to over-invest in control.

I operate as an independent consultant through Expert Zone Advisory—structured, insured, and set up for corporate partnerships. I'm most valuable on defined interim mandates (6-18 months) where you need someone who hits the ground running and needs minimal hand-holding.

I'm not the best fit if you need a junior implementer or someone content to manage activity. I'm built for situations where clarity and execution discipline create real business lift.

Let's talk about what you're solving for. Calendar is here: calendly.com/xrobitaille/30min.
