Dear Hiring Manager,

I'm writing to express interest in the Global Finance Tools Business Owner role at AXA Partners. After 25 years in insurance and finance—split evenly between advisory, interim management, and transformation delivery—I recognize exactly what this mandate requires: someone who speaks both Finance and IT fluently, owns the messy complexity of multi-entity harmonization, and delivers at scale.

What draws me to this role is the scope. You're not optimizing a single system; you're defining the finance technology operating model for AXA Partners globally. That's a business ownership problem wrapped in a tools problem—and that's where I add most value. I've spent the last decade helping CFO offices redesign closing cycles, reconcile reporting stacks, and build governance frameworks that actually stick across fragmented organizations. Most recently, I led a finance transformation program across three insurance entities: harmonized chart of accounts, consolidated three ERP instances into a single instance, and cut month-end close from 12 to 6 days. The lesson: tools don't win without process discipline and stakeholder alignment.

I come as an independent consultant with a track record in mid-to-large transformation contexts—PMO, AMOA, interim finance leadership. I'm equally comfortable in the weeds (mapping functional specs, stress-testing system configs) and at the table (translating business requirements, prioritizing against competing demands). AXA Partners' need to move all entities toward unified finance applications requires both skill sets running in parallel.

The honest thing: I work as a freelance consultant, not an employee. If the role is structured as interim or hybrid, I'm a natural fit. If it's CDI-only, that's worth clarifying early—I can discuss how to bridge that gap.

I'm available to discuss how to structure this engagement in a way that works for both of us.

Best regards,
Xavier Robitaille
