Dear Jobberry team,

I'm writing about the Chef de Projet Transformation role at your insurance and real estate lending client.

For 25 years, I've worked exclusively in insurance and finance—most of that time delivering transformation programmes where technical rigour meets stakeholder complexity. I've spent the last decade designing and executing operating model overhauls, process redesigns, and regulatory reporting transformations. This role maps directly to where I add the most value: programmes where clarity, discipline, and cross-functional alignment separate success from drift.

Two examples: I led a full-scale finance function redesign for a mid-market insurer, consolidating three regional operations into a unified model. Mapped as-is processes, designed controls frameworks, managed the programme across Finance, IT, and Operations—delivered on time, within budget, with measurable cost reduction. More recently, I restructured AMOA governance for a large mutual insurer preparing for regulatory change. Built the capability, trained the teams, embedded governance that stuck.

I know the sector. I've audited processes, rebuilt them, and trained people to run them. I'm comfortable with change management and the pedagogy piece matters to me—transformation only holds when people own it. On AI tools: I've integrated them into workflow analysis and reporting over the past two years. Not a data scientist, but pragmatic about where they accelerate discovery and reduce grunt work.

One honest gap: I've been independent for the last five years. This role is a full-time CDI. That's a deliberate shift for me—I'm looking for a structured, longer-term commitment where I can build something durable rather than moving between engagements.

Happy to talk through what you're building in the new Operations and Transformation directorate.

Best,

Xavier Robitaille
