Dear Hiring Manager,

I'm writing to apply for the Chef de Projet Décisionnel role at Assurances du Crédit Mutuel. After 25 years in insurance and finance—the last decade spent orchestrating large-scale data and reporting transformations—I see a direct fit between what you need and what I deliver.

Your 2026 priority is clear: lead the different workstreams of the SID overhaul, build alignment around them, and drive implementation. That's exactly the territory I work in. I've spent the last five years as an interim Finance Manager and Business Analyst, translating business complexity into executable roadmaps. At a major French insurer, I redesigned the regulatory reporting architecture while simultaneously rebuilding the PM governance layer—two parallel streams, 40+ stakeholders, zero delays. The result: a 35% reduction in month-end closing time and a single source of truth for both Finance and Risk.

What I bring: I bridge the gap between what Finance and Actuariat need, what IT can build, and what Compliance requires. I don't get lost in either direction. I also know how to run a program when the stakes are high and clarity is scarce—which, in a major system redesign, matters.

One honest thing: I've worked as a senior consultant and interim executive for the past decade. I'm open to a permanent role where the mission is substantive and the organization moves with intention. A transformational 18-24 month program at scale is where I add the most value.

I'd welcome a conversation about how the SID roadmap is currently sequenced and where the biggest stakeholder friction points sit. Happy to walk through recent delivery examples that are directly relevant.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
