I bring 25 years of insurance and finance expertise—the kind that bridges technical rigor, regulatory complexity, and delivery discipline. Most interim assignments focus on one skill. I add value where all three intersect: finance transformation, PMO governance, and stakeholder alignment under real constraints.

Over the past decade, I've led finance operating model redesigns for mid-cap insurers, rebuilt close and reporting processes under Solvency II compliance, and managed multi-year programmes where clarity on what's actually feasible matters more than optimism. One recent mandate involved restructuring a 40-person finance function across three entities while maintaining month-end close during migration—delivered on time, under budget, and with zero regulatory findings.

I'm typically engaged as an interim CFO office resource or senior PMO lead, not because I'm a generalist, but because insurance finance is my only domain. That focus means less ramp-up, faster pattern recognition, and immediate credibility with your finance and risk teams.

The practical trade-off: I work best on defined, high-stakes mandates where you need someone embedded for 6–18 months. Open-ended contracts or roles requiring permanent relocation don't fit my model—I'm structured for interim delivery.

If you're rebuilding a function, running a major programme, or need someone to sit between finance and operations who actually understands the constraints, let's talk specifics. I'm available for a call through my calendar or direct email.
