I bring 25 years of insurance and finance expertise directly aligned with what you're building. I've spent my career at the intersection of regulatory complexity, financial rigor, and operational delivery—exactly where PMO matters most in transformation programs.

What makes me useful here: I don't just track portfolios. I translate between Finance, Actuariat, IT, and Risk teams. I've redesigned closing processes, rebuilt PMO governance from scratch, and managed reporting chains for CFO offices. On this mission, that means I'll understand both your VMO's strategic intent and the constraints your teams are actually working under. The portfolio dashboards I produce aren't theater—they're built to surface real decisions.

Recent proof: I ran full-scale transformation delivery for a major insurance player—refactored their entire operating model, rearchitected process controls, and built the governance cadence that stuck. I'm comfortable producing weekly alarms and monthly board packs in the same breath, and equally comfortable challenging a trajectory when the numbers don't align.

There's one honest gap: I'm currently independent, not seeking a traditional CDI. UTi GROUP has the platform and credibility to make a senior consultant role real work. If this is structured as a substantive engagement—real autonomy, clear accountability, contract length that lets me settle in—I'm all in.

I'm based near Paris and can be in Lille consistently. Let's talk about what "autonomy" actually means here and where you see the biggest gaps in portfolio discipline right now.
